Mehran Madani is currently a Doctor of Design teaching at Department of Architecture and Landscape Architecture at North Dakota State University. He holds a Master’s Degree in Landscape Architecture from University of Toronto where he received the 2002 UTAP Award (a Scholarship from the Department of Architecture, Landscape and Design – University of Toronto). He also was honored to receive the prestigious ASLA 2006 research award, for his study which conducts a novel interdisciplinary study demonstrating a link between built environment affordances, possible changes in older adults’ social lifestyle, their quality of life, and a potential leap in older adults’ public health. Prior to joining WSU (IDI), he had been working in professional fields of landscape architecture and urban planning as a landscape designer and project designer at NAK Design Group (Toronto, Canada) and at Urban Arena in Newport Beach, California.
